Where such windows are fitted they shall be of the non-opening type and shall be of fire resisting construction fitted with wire reinforced glass and shall have permanently attached external shutters of steel or other equivalent material.

13. Boilers and machinery—General.—(1) In every ship, the machinery, boilers and other pressure vessels shall be of a design and construction adequate for the service for which they are intended and shall be so installed and protected as to reduce to a minimum any danger to persons on board.

(2) Without prejudice to the generality of the requirement of sub-rule (1), in boilers and machinery of every ship means shall be provided which will prevent over-pressure of any part of such machinery, boilers and other pressure vessels and in particular every boiler and every oil-fired steam generator shall be provided with not less than two safety valves:

Provided that the Central Government may, having regard to the output or any other feature of any boiler or unfired steam generator, permit only one safety valve to be fitted if it is satisfied that adequate protection against overpressure is provided.

14. Boilers and other pressure vessels.—(1) In every ship, every boiler or other pressure vessel and its respective mountings shall, before being put into service for the first time, be subjected to a hydraulic test to a pressure suitably in excess of the working pressure of that boiler or the pressure vessel as the case may be so as to ensure that the boiler or any other pressure vessel together with its mountings is adequate in strength and design for the service for which it is intended having regard to—

- (a) the design and the material of which it is constructed;

- (b) the working conditions under which it will be used.

(2) Without prejudice to the requirement of sub-rule (1), every such steam pipe or fitting shall, before being put into service for the first time, be subjected to a test by hydraulic pressure to a pressure suitably in excess of its working pressure to be determined having regard to the requirements of clauses (a) and (b) of sub-rule (1), and every such steam pipe or fitting shall be maintained in an efficient condition.

(3) Steam pipes shall be adequately supported.

(4) Provision shall be made which will avoid excessive stress likely to lead to the failure of any such steam pipe or fitting whether by reason of variation in temperature, vibration or otherwise.

(5) Efficient means shall be provided for draining every such steam pipe so as to ensure that the interior of the pipe is kept free of water and that water hammer action will not occur under any conditions likely to arise in the course of the intended service of the ship.

(6) If in any ship a steam pipe is required to receive steam from any source at a higher pressure than it can withstand with an adequate factor of safety, an efficient reducing valve, relief valve and pressure gauge shall be fitted to such pipe.

20. Air pressure system.—(1) In every ship in which machinery essential for the propulsion and safety of the ship or persons on board is required to be started, operated or controlled solely by compressed air, an efficient air system shall be provided which shall include a sufficient number of air compressors and compressed air storage vessels so as to ensure that an adequate supply of compressed air is available under all conditions likely to be met in service.

(2) (a) Parts of every such compressed air system other than a pneumatic control system which are subjected to air pressure shall be so designed and constructed as to withstand, with adequate factor of safety, the maximum working stresses to which they may be subjected and every air pressure pipe or fitting in such system shall, before being put into service for the first time, be subjected to a hydraulic test to twice its maximum working pressure and be maintained in an efficient condition.

(b) Means shall be provided to prevent over-pressure in any part of any such compressed air system and where water jackets or casings of air compressors and coolers might be subjected to dangerous over-pressure due to leakage into them from air pressure parts, suitable and adequate pressure relief arrangements shall be provided.

(c) In every such compressed air system provision shall be made—

(i) to reduce to a minimum entry of oil into the system;

(ii) to drain the system, and

(iii) to protect the system from the effects of internal explosion.

(d) In every such compressed air system, discharge pipes from starting air compressors shall lead directly to the starting air receivers, and all starting air pipes from the air receivers leading to main or auxiliary engines shall be entirely separate from the compressor discharge pipe system.

21. Cooling water system.—In every ship in which cooling water services are essential for the running of the propelling machinery, at least two means of operating such water services shall be provided.

22. Lubricating and other Oil Systems.—In every ship in which oil for lubrication, cooling or operation of the main propelling machinery and its ancillary services is circulated under pressure, adequate provision shall be made so that in the event of the failure of a pump an alternative means of circulating such oil is available.

23. Oil and Gaseous Fuel Installations.—(1) In every ship, oil fuel provided for use in boilers or machinery shall have a flash point of not less than 65.6°C (closed test):

Provided that the Central Government may, subject to such conditions as it may impose,—

(a) permit any ship to use oil fuel having a flash point of not less than 54.5°C in boilers or of not less than 43.3°C in internal and combustion type machinery; and

(b) permit the use of gaseous fuel in ships designed for the carriage of liquefied gas if such fuel results solely from evaporation of cargo carried.

(2) Nothing in sub-rule (1) shall apply to fuel provided for the machinery operating the emergency source of electric power required under clause (a) of sub-rule (3) of rule 7, clause (a) of sub-rule (3) of rule 8 and clause (a) of sub-rule (3) of rule 9.

(3) In every ship in which oil or gaseous fuel is used, the arrangements for the storage, distribution and utilisation of the fuel shall be such that, having regard to the hazards of fire and explosion which the use of such fuel may entail, the safety of the ship and of persons on board is preserved.

(4) In every ship in which oil or gaseous fuel is used in engines or boilers for the propulsion or safety of the ship, the arrangements for the storage, distribution and utilisation of the fuel shall be such that the effective use of the engines can be maintained under all conditions likely to be met by the ship in service.

(5) Every oil fuel installation which serves a boiler that supplies steam for the propulsion of the ship shall include not less than two oil fuel units.

24. Communication between bridge and engine room.—Every ship shall be provided with two means of communicating orders from the navigating bridge to the engine room control platform. One of the means shall be an engine room telegraph.

25. Steering gear.—(1) Every ship shall be provided with efficient main and auxiliary steering gear:

Provided that if duplicate steering gear power units and their connections are fitted to the satisfaction of the Central Government and each such power unit complies with the requirements of Clause (c) of sub-rule (2), and the duplicate units and connections operating together comply with the requirements of Clause (b) of sub-rule 2, the Central Government may dispense with the requirement of providing an auxiliary steering gear on any ship.

(2) In every ship,—

- (a) the main steering gear, including the rudder and associated fittings, shall be of adequate strength and sufficient to steer the ship at maximum service speed. The main steering gear and rudder stock shall be so designed that they are not damaged at maximum astern speed;
- (b) the main steering gear shall be capable of putting the rudder over from 35° on one side to 35° on the other side with the ship running ahead at maximum service speed. The rudder shall be capable of being put over from 35° on either side to 30° on the other side in 28 seconds at maximum service speed;
- (c) the auxiliary steering gear shall be capable of being brought rapidly into action and shall be of adequate strength and of sufficient power to enable the ship to be steered at navigable speed. In any ship a rudder stock of over 35.56 centimetres diameter in way of the tiller is required to comply with the requirements of clause (a), the auxiliary steering gear shall be operated by power.

(3) In every ship, which is fitted with a power operated steering gear, the position of the rudder shall be indicated at the principal steering station.

26. Spare gear.—Every ship shall be provided with sufficient spare gear having regard to the intended service of the ship.

27. Compasses.—(1) Subject to the provisions of sub-rule (2), every ship shall be provided with two efficient magnetic compasses which shall be mounted in binnacles and sited on the ship's centre line. One of such compasses shall be provided for use as a standard compass and shall be sited near the normal steering position and in a position from which the view of the horizon is least obstructed. The other of such compasses shall be provided for use as a steering compass and shall be sited at the normal steering position unless the projected or reflected image of the standard magnetic compass is provided for this purpose or gyro-compass or a repeater from a gyro or transmitting magnetic compass is positioned near the normal steering position, in which case the second magnetic compass, mounted in a binnacle or in a pedestal, may be fitted at the emergency steering position.

(2) Where there is no emergency steering position, two magnetic compasses and binnacles shall not be required, provided that the ship is equipped with a standard projector magnetic compass and a gyro-compass with repeaters and provided also that a spare magnetic compass bowl with its gimbal units is carried on board so that it may be interchanged with the standard compass if that compass should become unserviceable.

28. Anchors and chain cables.—Every ship shall be provided with such anchors and chain cables as are sufficient in number, weight and strength, having regard to the size and the intended service of the ship.

(2) In every ship, machinery driving-forced and induced—draught fans, oil fuel transfer pumps, oil fuel unit pumps and other similar fuel pumps shall be fitted with remote controls situated outside the spaces in which machinery or pumps are situated. Such controls shall be capable of stopping such machinery or pumps in the event of fire in the said spaces.

(3) (a) In every ship, every pipe connected to any oil fuel storage, setting, or daily service tank, not being a double bottom tank, which, if damaged, would permit discharge of contents so as to cause a fire hazard, shall be fitted with a valve or cock which shall be secured to the tank to which it is connected and be capable of being closed from a readily accessible position outside the space in which the tank is situated:

Provided that if any inlet pipe is fitted to such a tank, a non-return valve similarly secured to the tank may be substituted for the valve or cock required under this sub-rule.
